35 PART XLV. STUDY OF A RENEWABLE ENERGY PORTFOLIO STANDARD
36 FOR NORTH CAROLINA (Albertson, Kinnaird)
37

38 SECTION 45.1. The North Carolina Utilities Commission shall engage a 39 United States Department of Energy-sponsored national energy laboratory, and if 40 necessary, a qualified consulting firm, to study the costs and benefits of a renewable 41 energy portfolio standard (RPS) requiring North Carolina's investor-owned utilities to 42 provide varying percentage scenarios up to fifteen percent (15%) of their retail electric 43 sales from renewable energy and energy efficient resources by 2017. In conducting the 44 study, the Utilities Commission shall consider how an RPS will complement the

1 voluntary North Carolina Green Power program and foster the development of a 2 renewable electricity market in the State. This study shall consider and quantify the 3 potential impacts of an RPS on the State's economy, electric service provision, and 4 environmental quality, including:

- 5 (1) Evaluation of in-State renewable energy resources. – An evaluation of 6 potentially available in-State renewable energy resources, including 7 solar photovoltaic; metered solar thermal; run-of-the-river hydropower 8 not to exceed 20 megawatts in electric generation capacity per site;
9 landfill gas; nonutility combined heat and power; wind power; ocean
10 current and wave energy; biomass from agricultural wastes, animal 11 wastes, hog wastes using innovative waste management systems that 12 do not employ a lagoon as defined in G.S. 143-215.10(a), wood wastes
13 from industrial processes, nonwoody energy crops, urban wood wastes 14 and mill residues; and energy efficiency measures that provide 15 substantial, long-term energy savings to the retail customer as 16 compared with currently used technology.
- 17 (2) Estimation of potential benefits. – An estimation of the potential 18 benefits that will contribute to the total cost of implementing an RPS 19 and indirectly provide economic, social, and environmental benefits to 20 the State, including employment, additions to Gross State Product and 21 income; the hedge value to investor-owned utilities, electric 22 membership cooperatives and municipalities of reduction in natural 23 gas prices and wholesale electric prices resulting from displacement of 24 natural gas-fired electric generation by renewable energy generation
25 and energy efficiency measures; benefits from reduction in energy
26 losses in transmission and distribution lines, deferral of substation 27 upgrades, reduction in reactive power loss, and increased reliability of 28 electric supply; and impacts on CO2 emissions, criteria air pollutant 29 emissions regulated by the Federal Clean Air Act Amendments of 30 1990, and water use.
- 31 (3) Estimation of potential costs. – An estimation of potential costs that 32 will contribute to the total cost of implementing an RPS policy, 33 including the current and future cost and performance of renewable 34 energy technologies; electric transmission costs; time differentiation of 35 renewable energy generation based on potential in-State renewable 36 energy resources; capacity value, integration and administration and 37 transaction costs of renewable energy resources; and avoided costs
38 using a conventional plant proxy, integrated energy model or a
39 dispatch simulation model based on mix of potential in-State 40 renewable energy resources.
- 41 (4) Inclusion of incentives and model parameters. – Use of quantified 42 parameters in economic models for fossil fuel price uncertainty;
43 renewable energy technology costs; federal and State tax credit 44 availability for renewable energy resources; presence of

1 interconnection and net metering standards; varying RPS percentage
2 scenarios ranging up to fifteen percent (15%) of investor-owned utility 3 retail electric sales; financing and contracting assumptions; availability 4 of imports; wholesale market uncertainty; resource eligibility; and 5 growth in energy load.

6 SECTION 45.2. In studying the items listed in Section 45.1 of this Part, the 7 North Carolina Utilities Commission shall, with assistance from the Department of 8 Commerce, Department of Agriculture, Department of Environment and Natural 9 Resources, and the State Energy Office, consider the impact of the estimated costs and 10 benefits of a renewable energy portfolio standard on residential, commercial, and 11 industrial retail consumers of electricity in the State.

12 SECTION 45.3. The Utilities Commission shall submit a final report on its 13 findings and recommendations pursuant to this study, including any legislative 14 proposals, to the Environmental Review Commission and the Joint Legislative Utility 15 Review Committee on or before April 1, 2006.
